- Established first-team starter since 2022/23 season
- Peak involvement season: 2023/24

Interpretation:

Regular starter in a top-5 league at a young age, indicating stable performance level and trust from coaching staff.

Attacking Contribution

- Career: 20 Goals / 22 Assists
- Average Goal Contributions: ~0.39 per 90

- Shot accuracy ~33–35%
- Low goals-per-shot conversion
- Limited penalty-area finishing efficiency

Interpretation:

Reaches shooting zones frequently after individual actions but finishing quality is not elite.

Creative Development Trend

- Assist production increasing season by season
- Growing involvement in final third actions

Interpretation:

Profile evolving from transition runner to structured attacking contributor.

Ball Progression Profile

- Majority of offensive impact through carries and wide actions
- Team progression often initiated on his flank

Interpretation:

Ball-advancing winger whose value lies in progressing play and destabilizing defensive structures.

Data-Based Role Conclusion

Statistical profile indicates a progression & destabilization winger rather than a penalty-box finisher, providing value through advancing possession and creating advantages on the flank.

Qualitative Interpretation

Physically, the player has an ideal profile for a wide attacking role.

Elite acceleration and explosiveness allow him to consistently create separation in isolation situations. His athletic profile fits the positional requirement of a winger responsible for stretching defensive lines.

Technically, he is clearly ball-dominant. His main strength is the ability to manipulate defenders in 1v1 situations and progress play through carries. Final actions remain inconsistent, mainly due to execution speed after high-intensity actions rather than lack of technique.

Tactically, the player operates mostly in a vertical attacking context. Athletic Club does not play a fully positional dominant style, therefore many of his actions are based on space exploitation rather than structured circulation. Despite this, he shows the necessary foundations — maintaining width, attacking timing of advantage, and understanding when to isolate the defender. The profile suggests adaptability to a more structured positional environment.

Psychologically, he plays with confidence and initiative. He actively requests the ball and does not hide after unsuccessful actions. Performance consistency still depends on rhythm of the game, which is typical for attacking wingers, but maturity level suggests potential short-term improvement in a higher-structure environment.

4. Final Evaluation & Recommendation

Assigned Level: Level 2 — Contextual Adaptation Risk

Nico Williams already demonstrates elite-level qualities in key winger attributes, particularly acceleration, dribbling in isolation, and ability to destabilize defensive lines. In open-space attacking environments he performs at a top competitive level and consistently creates advantages against defenders.

The Level 2 classification does not relate to player quality, but to contextual adaptation. The player has developed primarily within a vertical, transition-oriented attacking structure where many actions occur in space rather than within sustained positional dominance. As a result, certain behaviors required in a positional play environment — tempo management, earlier decision-making, and efficiency in structured final-third situations — are not yet fully consolidated.

Despite this, the player shows sufficient tactical foundation and cognitive flexibility to project improvement within a possession-dominant model. The technical execution and decision consistency are expected to improve in a more structured attacking context with higher positional reference.

Conclusion:

Already elite in individual attacking capacity, but evaluated as Level 2 due to adaptation risk to a highly structured positional system rather than lack of quality.

Recommendation:

Recruitable profile for first team with expectation of performance enhancement after adaptation to positional play environment.
